THE CHURCH OF SAINTS BARNABAS AND CYPRIAN, Haddington, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

The property of the parish is at 6400 Haverford Avenue, and consists of a large church building with parish hall facilities forming part of the same structure, and an adjacent rectory, as well as a house for the assistant rector at 621 Elsworth Street. The merger of St. Cyprian's with St. Barnabas' occurred shortly before the Diocesan Survey and resulted, in part at least, from the destruction of St. Cyprian's Church building as part of city clearance work. The church building in Haddington is in structurally sound condition but a great deal of finishing, renovation, and maintenance work must be done before full use can be made of the space which is potentially available. The clergy homes are reported to be in fair to good condition, the rectory needing some minor maintenance work.

THE CHURCH NEIGHBORHOOD

Haddington is a rapidly changing area and at present combines elements of Italian, Jewish, and African origins. The Negro population is increasing, the proportion of British Isles and Northern European stock is decreasing, and people of Italian origin are reported to be at least as numerous as ten years ago. The community is one of row-housing, predominately single-family units, but with a number of homes being converted to apartment and rooming house use. Close to St. Barnabas' is a major thoroughfare, with the expected shopping centers and other commercial uses along it.

Philadelphia has been divided into tracts by the United States Census Bureau. For the purposes of the Survey, the tract in which St. Barnabas and St. Cyprian is located (34-R) and the five adjacent census tracts, have been designated as the parish area for the church. In the following table information is entered concerning the population characteristics of that area, as of 1960. Since that time there have been many changes, but the figures provide at least a point of departure for evaluating those changes.

34-R	14.7	2.0	2.7	8.5
34-S	21.6	5.3	5.2	10.1

In 1961 there was a high proportion of older people in some of the census tracts, 34-I for instance, and there was a fairly highly proportion of youngsters in other tracts. The non-white population was very unevenly distributed, and there were major variations in the educational level of the adults. It is interesting to find that Census Tract 34-O, which is largely a park area, had eight residents in 1960. In the next table, which shows the residence of Episcopalians in the area, it may be seen that there are seven people reported from that tract by Episcopal churches. As the table is studied it should be borne in mind that the Episcopal Church throughout Philadelphia reaches people equal in number to 2.0% of the population.

Census Tract	1960	Total Epis.	% Of Pop. Epis.	Total Parish Memb.	% Epis. Memb.	% Parish Memb.

Total	36,172	635	1.8	102	16.1	35.3

As the table shows, the Episcopal Church is about as strong in the Haddington area as it is throughout the rest of the city. The Church of St. Barnabas and St. Cyprian is not especially strong, either in proportion to the total Episcopal membership or in terms of its own membership, finding only 16.1% of the total resident Episcopalians and 35.3% of its own membership. There should be no surprise at that, since the present congregation, being a merger of two groups, finds its members more widely dispersed than would probably have been the case otherwise. In fact, a study of the map showing the congregation of St. Barnabas gives a far more clustered impression than does the combined map.

THE CHURCH PROGRAM

The Church Self-Study Form, which was filled out by the Local Survey Committee and which is reproduced in the following pages, was designed to gather information from churches in a wide variety of circumstances. It does not, however, secure adequate information from a congregation which is formed from the merger of two congregations only a short time before the form is filled out. That is more particularly true in the case of two congregations which have been in considerable difficulties due to changing communities and declining memberships. In the year since the form was completed, there have undoubtedly been many changes in the facts reported, a crystallization in some directions, and an increasing flexibility in others. It is urged that the congregation prepare, for its own use, a second version of the Church Self-Study Form, concentrating on those aspects which are especially applicable, and asking questions about themselves in other areas which are not so extensively developed in the present form.

A start should be made in the consideration of the actual membership of the congregation. The Diocesan Journal figures, from St. Cyprian's and St. Barnabas' suggest a baptized membership of 481, while the membership map shows the location of 291 persons. To the baptized membership list will need to be added an accounting of the people served by the congregation in the community, in any of the variety of ways, even though they may not be Episcopalians or even desirous of becoming members.

According to the Church Self-Study Form, as filled out in 1964, about 60% of the 481 baptized members are in church or classes on the usual Sunday. By itself that is a commendable figure, but when taken in conjunction with the mapped membership, the regular attendance of some 289 persons is equal to almost the complete mapped membership of 291. With all due respect to the devotion of the people of St.

Barnabas and St. Cyprian it should be realized that such a level of attendance is extremely unusual and suggests, at least, that an interpretation of the figures is called for. The Christian Education Program is a major concern of the congregation and appears to be in a process of development. Emphasis on the training of teachers is to be commended, as is the Vacation Church School and the adult classes. The congregation has a good participation at Quiet Days in Lent and Advent.

The several organizations of the congregation are very clearly in a state of transition. The congregation may wish to adopt the "unit" approach in planning the work of the organizations, as far as feasible. Many parishes have found that projects or classes lasting for five or six weeks are more enthusiastically carried out and that much more is accomplished, than is true of programs which last for an entire year. People apparently feel free to commit themselves for a shorter period of time although they are reluctant to become involved in a more lengthy program. That same approach might be considered in planning for work with segments of the congregation which are not now effectively a part of the life of the parish.

The financial figures are not too valid, at the present time probably, but it should be noted that of an annual reported income of $12,500.00, almost 70% came from the regular pledges of the members. Finances constitute one of the major problems facing the combined congregation, and careful stewardship of resources is imperative. If it has not already been done, it is suggested that a list of refurbishing and maintenance priorities be drawn up and closely adhered to. At the same time the congregation should not forget its obligation to support work outside of its own parish limits.

Evangelism is another, an even more important, task confronting the congregation and members are strongly urged to support the clergy in their work of establishing contact with potential members and maintaining ties with present parishioners. Training for evangelism is important, but probably should be based upon initial enthusiasm by the individuals.

REPORTED MEMBERSHIP FROM MAPS

The 291 persons reported on the map submitted by St. Cyprian's and St. Barnabas' congregations are mostly to be found west of the Schuylkill River, the largest proportion being found north of Baltimore Avenue and west of Belmont Avenue. Only a very small proportion, 1.4% of the members, lives in the same census tract as the church buildings, and only 35.3% of the total lives in the six census tracts which comprise the arbitrarily assigned parish area. The Church of St. Barnabas and St. Cyprian obviously serves a wide-spread constituency rather than a neighborhood, at present. Those widespread members should certainly not be neglected, but it is urged that the congregation turn its attention to the nearer vicinity of the church property as a major area for concentration of effort.

REPORTED MEMBERSHIP AND FINANCIAL DATA FROM JOURNALS

It does not seem to the General Division of Research and Field Study that an analysis of the membership and financial figures for the two separate congregations are of great value in a consideration of the present congregation. A great many changes have taken place, since 1963, the last year for which figures are available, and there are incompletenesses in the report which seriously hamper any analysis. A question as to the actual membership of the congregations has already been raised in this Study and careful attention to that subject is recommended.

DATA ON THE CONGREGATION

The Episcopal Census for the combined congregation of St. Barnabas and St. Cyprian was received too late for processing to take place. If time is available in the near future, that data will be examined and the results will be forwarded to the congregation.

DISCUSSION AND RECOMMENDATIONS

ST. BARNABAS' CHURCH, Haddington, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

PH-45
RFS/ht

The present St. Barnabas' Church represents the combined strengths of the former St. Barnabas' and St. Cyprian's which were separate parishes. The result of the merger is a church which is more than merely the combining of two congregations. There has been an increase of spirit, a mutual strengthening, and an awareness of the opportunities for growth in spirit and service that face the new congregation. St. Barnabas' Church is showing itself worthy of support from within, as well as from outside of its own membership.

The congregation, of course, faces many problems as well as many opportunities. The church property is large enough to be used for almost any activity, but it is in need of extensive maintenance and modernization. Some of that work is being carried forward at present. It is urged that the congregation keep firmly in mind the long-range program for the improvement of the church and the parish house, a program which should result from careful consideration of the priorities as well as of the available money. A more serious problem and opportunity, rolled into one, is in the steady change in the general character of the neighborhood. Haddington has an increasing number of Negroes, and rather unusually, an increasing number of immigrants from Italy, while the former residents, of other ethnic groups, are moving away. It is important that all members of the congregation be continually ready to extend the influence of Christianity, as presented by the Episcopal Church through St. Barnabas', to all sorts and conditions of people. That readiness must be based upon careful study of the teachings of the Church and on a consideration of the implications of those teachings for the Haddington of today. A number of adults in the congregation are already studying and it is hoped that a great many more will join them. There is greater activity and spiritual depth in the congregation today than there has been in the past, and it is probable that the increased vitality will spread throughout the congregation. Certainly the neighborhood is more aware of the existence of St. Barnabas' Church than it has been for many years.

As the members of the congregation become more sure of themselves in the Christian faith and more convinced of the necessity to offer that faith to others, there may be an almost spontaneous emphasis on lay evangelism. Informal contact with neighbors and other acquaintances is the most effective way, perhaps, by which the Gospel can be spread, but there may also need to be a more formal approach. Possibly an organization of the parish area into small neighborhoods or blocks would be effective, with devoted persons in each vicinity being on the lookout for new residents, for people in difficulty whom the Church might help, and for members of the congregation who are ill or in other types of distress. The clergy of the parish can encourage formal visits by the laity, and can act on the news which the visitors pass on, in order to be more closely in contact with individual circumstances.

The present congregation is primarily responsible for extending the work of the Church in Haddington, for providing teachers to an improved church school, in maintaining the high level of attendance at services, for constantly improving the facilities, and for financial support on which much of the program depends. If there is a possibility of assistance from outside the congregation, that might take the form of an additional member of the staff, whether this be an ordained person or one who has a specialized background in other areas which are of great concern to Haddington and, therefore, to St. Barnabas'.
